Community Learning in Action: TSUL's Open and Inclusive Educational Events

Public Educational Events and Lifelong Learning at Tashkent State University of Law

Tashkent State University of Law (TSUL) is fundamentally committed to advancing the principles of SDG 4 (Quality Education) by fostering an environment of inclusive, equitable, and continuous learning. In direct alignment with Target 4.3.2, the university hosts a comprehensive suite of educational events, public lectures, and community-centric initiatives with the participation of university professors, local and foreign specialists, scientists and professors. These programmes are designed for broad accessibility, welcoming the general public, alumni, local residents, and prospective students to engage with legal scholarship and cultural enrichment. The university's outreach efforts are a core component of its mission to elevate legal awareness and promote a culture of lawfulness throughout society.

Public Lectures and Faculty-Led Seminars

TSUL maintains a vibrant schedule of public events, lectures, and masterclasses featuring its own leading professors as well as invited local and international experts.

- Open Legal Lectures: The university provides a free “Open Legal Lectures” series for the population, held every Saturday from 11:00 to 13:00 in the Big Conference Hall. These sessions cover a wide range of pertinent legal and financial topics, with recent lectures including:

Student-Led Community Engagement

Students at TSUL are central to the university's community outreach, leading and participating in high-impact educational projects.

- “Propaganda Train” Project: In partnership with the Ministry of Justice, this project was launched on November 28 to widely promote constitutional knowledge. Following a competitive selection process where 598 students registered, 126 student volunteers were chosen to participate in this national initiative.

- “Street Law” Project: This project sends volunteer students and professors into local schools to provide foundational legal education. During the 2023-2024 academic year, the project engaged 608 volunteer students and 56 teachers, who conducted 225 training sessions in 155 schools, reaching a total of 6,915 students in 174 schools across the country. For the Tashkent State University of Law, the project continues in the 2024-2025 academic year with 75 volunteer students and 33 professors.

“LAW SCHOOL” APP

Reference Note about “Law School” App

On May 24, 2024, under Presidential Decree No. PF-80, “On Increasing the Responsibility of Justice Bodies and Institutions and Forming a Streamlined Management System Within the Framework of Administrative Reforms”, the government mandated the establishment of an online legal literacy school to enhance young people’s legal knowledge.

This initiative, a collaborative effort between the Ministry of Justice and Tashkent State University of Law (TSUL), has led to the development of a mobile application called “Huquq Maktabi” (Law School). The app is designed to improve the legal awareness and culture of citizens by offering free online legal courses.

The app includes numerous courses on relevant topics, featuring video lectures, presentations, and slides. After completing the courses, users can take specialized tests to assess their knowledge and receive a certificate of completion. The course topics are tailored to address common issues raised by the public in applications and complaints to state authorities, covering areas such as social protection, access to courts, family law, labour relations, housing, and utilities. This targeted approach aims to increase the app’s relevance and accessibility, making it beneficial for society and likely to become popular quickly.

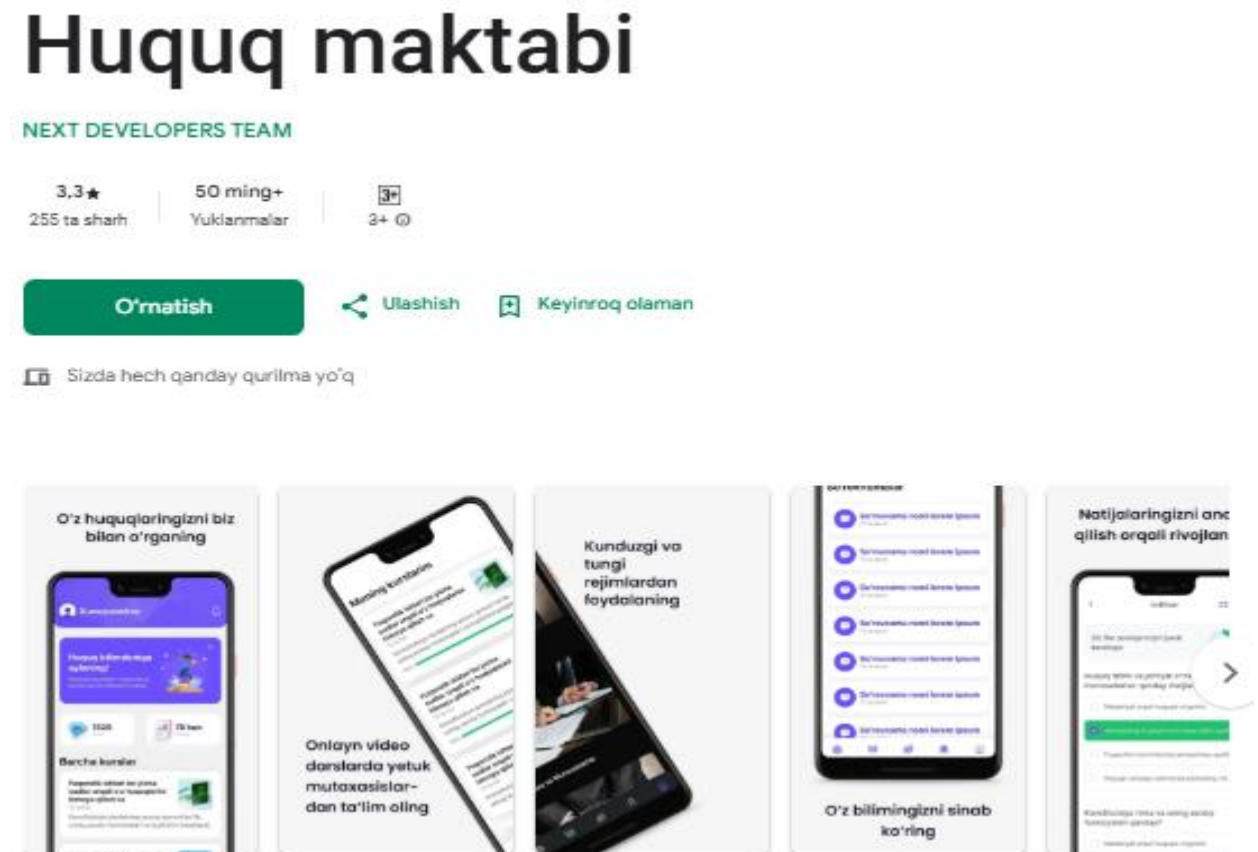

The “Huquq Maktabi” app is expected to foster respect for the law among youth, elevate legal awareness and culture in society, and contribute to resolving various social and legal issues within the community.

Fellowship 2025

Tashkent State University of Law (TSUL) CALR Fellowship

This program encompasses a broad range of emerging legal issues concerning Central Asian countries.

The Fellowship Position and Its Purpose

The aim of the fellowship is to conduct research on issues related to the legal reforms in Central Asian countries, with particular attention to present and future challenges in the theory of law, legislation and legal innovations.

22 textbooks have been published for law colleges

As you know, in accordance with the Presidential Decree of the Republic of Uzbekistan dated April 13, 2018, “On Organizational Measures for the Further Improvement of the Activities of the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Uzbekistan”, Tashkent State University of Law (TSUL) is responsible for coordinating the educational and methodological process in law colleges, as well as providing them with practical and informational support.

To fulfil these tasks, 22 new-generation textbooks, specifically designed for law colleges, have been developed in collaboration with the teaching staff of TSUL.

In connection with this, a presentation of the new-generation textbooks was held at Tashkent State University of Law.

The event was attended by the Acting Rector of TSUL, Professor Islambek Rustambekov, heads of structural units, and the authors of the textbooks.

Speakers at the event highlighted the significance and importance of these textbooks.

As mentioned, the new-generation textbooks were created in line with modern requirements, incorporating contemporary pedagogical technologies.

For reference:

Each of the 22 textbooks, intended for law colleges, was printed in 3,558 copies and distributed to the regions based on allocation plans.

Through a dynamic and sustained portfolio of initiatives - from the digitally accessible “Law School” app to the long-standing, in-person services of the Legal Clinic and the impactful “Street Law” project - Tashkent State University of Law actively fulfils its commitment to SDG 4.3.2. By ensuring these educational resources and events are free and open to all, TSUL not only promotes lifelong learning but also contributes significantly to building a more just, informed, and equitable society. These efforts also directly support SDG 10 \(Reduced Inequalities\) and underscore the university’s role as a vital community partner dedicated to the public good.
